Bryan is the President and Principal of SVA Consulting, a member of the SVA family of companies.

In this role, Bryan works closely with clients to help prepare their organizations for transformation by shaping strategic vision and guiding the development of practical implementation strategies.

Bryan leads SVA Consulting's efforts to help organizations address complex challenges related to growth, operational efficiency, and technology-enabled change. He partners with executive teams to align business strategy, operating models, and technology investments so organizations can scale effectively and achieve measurable results. His work often focuses on organizational change, transformation strategy, program leadership, and the design of operating models that support long-term growth.

Drawing on extensive experience in both business leadership and academia, Bryan brings a thoughtful and pragmatic perspective to solving complex business problems. He is known for helping organizations navigate periods of significant change, guiding leadership teams through strategic decision-making while building alignment across stakeholders. His ability to translate complex ideas into practical, actionable strategies enables organizations to move from vision to execution with confidence.
